Maximum Annual Contribution Limits	For 2023, the contribution limit is $6,500 ($7,500 for account holders age 50 and older) or 100% of earned income, whichever is less. A nonemployed spouse may contribute up to $6,500 per year ($7,500 for account holders age 50 and older) if joint taxable income permits.	For 2023, the contribution limit is $6,500 ($7,500 for account holders age 50 and older) or 100% of earned income, whichever is less. A nonemployed spouse may contribute up to $6,500 per year ($7,500 for account holders age 50 and older) if joint taxable income permits.	For 2023, the contribution limit is the lesser of 25% of W-2 pay or $66,000 (based on the first $330,000 of compensation); the contribution is effectively limited to 20% of pay if self-employed.	For 2023, the maximum salary deferral is $15,500 ($19,000 for account holders age 50 and older). The employer must match deferrals dollar-for-dollar, up to 3% of compensation (can be reduced to 1% in two out of five years), or make a 2% nonelective contribution to all eligible employees.	Employees can defer 100% of taxable income up to $22,500 (up to $30,000 for employees age 50 and older). Total employer/employee contributions cannot exceed $66,000 ($73,500 for employees age 50 and older).	Employees can defer taxable income up to $22,500. A participant age 50 and older can make a $7,500 catch-up contribution, in addition to the annual deferral limit. The employer is required to make either a 3% nonelective contribution or 100% of employee deferrals up to 3% of compensation, plus 50% of employee deferrals in excess of 3% up to 5% of compensation (for a total of 4%).

Maximum Annual Contribution Limits	Employees can defer 100% of taxable income up to $22,500 (up to $30,000 for employees age 50 and older). The employer contributions are limited to a maximum of 25% of compensation; for self-employed, it's based on a specific computation using IRS guidelines. Total employer/employee contributions cannot exceed $66,000 ($73,500 if employee is age 50 and older).	Contributions are limited to the lesser of 25% of W-2 compensation or $66,000 (based on first $330,000 of compensation); contributions are effectively limited to 20% of pay if self-employed.	Employees can defer 100% of taxable income up to $22,500 (up to $30,000 for employees age 50 and older). Total employer/employee contributions cannot exceed $66,000 ($73,500 for employees age 50 and older). An additional catch-up may apply.	Employees can defer 100% of taxable income up to $22,500 (up to $30,000 for employees age 50 and older). An additional catch-up may apply.	Contributions are dependent on participant's age and income (older employees generally receive higher contributions) and a formula that is specified in the plan document. It can be either a percentage of pay or a flat dollar amount. An annual interest credit is also included. The rate of return changes each year, but is guaranteed and independent of the plan's investment performance.	In general, the annual benefit for a participant under a defined benefit plan cannot exceed the lesser of 100% of the participant's average compensation for their highest three consecutive calendar years or $265,000 for 2023. Actuarial assumptions and computations are required to calculate contributions.
Deadline to Establish	Plan must be established by business's fiscal year-end, generally December 31.
